They Got Millions and She Gots $15,000 a Tear, a House, and $10,000 Cash-No Objections to the Bequests to Colleges. Yesterday afternoon the fact was made known that the will of Daniel B. Fayerweather, the millionaise leather merchant, is to be con-tested by his widow, Mrs. Lucy Fayerweather. According to the stipulations of the will, $2,100,000 was to be given to various colleges and institutions of learning. Mrs. Fayerweather was to receive a house and stable. $10,000 in cash, and an annual income of $15,000. There were various minor bequests, and then the residue of the property was left absolutely to the executors, Henry B. Vaughn, a leather merchant of 18 Ferry street; Justus L. Bulkley, also a leather merchant, of 76 Gold street, and Thomas G. Ritch of the firm of Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford, lawyers, of 16 Wall street. To the executors also is given siderable discretion as to the withholding of the bequests to colleges.

The exact amount of the fortune left is not known, but a rough calculation shows that such of the executors would receive under these codicils about $1,000,000, while the widow received much less than a third of the surplus over the bequests to the colleges.

Ascording to the terms r 'the will proper, all the residuary property w. to be divided among the colleges, but this was revoked by a were at that date the only executors, to be shared equally between them. A second codieil made Vaughn an executor, but gave him no share in the residuary estate, but the last cil made Vaughn an executor, but gave him no share in the residuary estate, but the last codicil made on the day of Mr. Fayerweather's death gives Vaughn an equal share with his ec-executora. Mr. Hitch was the lawyer who drew up the will.

Last Monday afternoon when the will was filed with the Surrogate Mrs. Fayerweather, together with the heirs at law, Misses Emma it, Fayerweather, Lucy J. Beardsley, and Mary W. Achter, signed a waiver of citations and consent to probate, and to all appearances the estate was to be settled guickly and without contest. Since Monday, though, Mrs. Fayerweather has changed her mind. Accordingly, she sent a request to the Burrogate's office yesterday that the waiver and consent to probate se revoked, as she had signed the paper under a misunderstanding of the facts and without knowled of her rights. The Coudert Brothers, Mrs. Fayerweather's attorneys, filed the petition and Surrogate Ransom allowed it and gave the petitioners three days in which to propare objections. These papers have not been made out as yet, as the attorneys were only made aware yesterday of Mrs. Payerweather's decision to enter a contest Just what the grounds of objection will be is not definitely known, but the chief one is said to be undue influence. There is said to be no objection on the part of the heirs at law to the bequests to the colleges—that is, to the will itself—but chiefly to the distribution of several millions among the executors, while the widow gets so small a portion. comparatively, and the two nisces only $20,000 seeb.

It is said that the last codicil, made on the day of the death, will play an important part in the coming contest. On this codicil the chief grounds of objection are said to be placed.

Mr. Buikley, one of the executors as and he would speak when the appropriate what one another since the fact of the contest was made known he declined to answer. He said that he would speak when the appropriate what was not known at first is now generally understood.

BOY BURGLARS IN CASTLETON.

They Broke Into Mr. Ten Eych's Summer Manufon and Feasted.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.-The small boy is naturally deprayed, at least the Castleton small boy is, Castleton is a small village a few miles south of here, on the east bank of the Hudson. One of Albany's fire insurance agents, Mr. Leonard Gansevoort Ten Eyek of the firm of Ten Eyek & Lansing, has a somewhat spacious residence summer and fall, but abandons for the city in the winter. Two weeks ago he closed his Castleton home and removed with his family to Albany. The other day one of his neighbors wrote to him that he had forgotten to put away toboggan belonging to one of his children. and that it was still lying in the yard. Suspecting something amiss Mr. Ten Eyck hastened to Castleton and surprised two youthful burglars. At the time of Mr. Ten Eyek's entrance two small boys, neither over 8 years old, were seated in his kitchen holding high carnival. They had broken into the preserve closet and abstracted a large share of its con-tents, on which and some other edibles they were banquesting. A lamp hung o'er them with its wick turned so high that smoke and flame roured from the chimney. A rousing fire had been built in the kitchen range, and on it a pail had been placed in which all the silver plate they could find was meiting. Their object in melting the silverware, they said, was to make builets for an old platel in their possession.

was to make builtes for an old pistel in their possession.

An examination of the culprits and the house revealed a queer state of affairs. The boys had broken into the house by shattering the shutters with a hammer and then breaking the window glass. Once in they had nailed up the window glass. Once in they had nailed up the window and opened a back door, through which they continued to enter. Their mode of operations was to play trunt from school and secrete themselves in the house. Malicious mischief was not their only motive, for they had ransacked the house from top to bottom and carefully carried out and secreted under the barn everything they thought they could sell for junk. To make their kitchen camp more astractive, they had hauled handsome russ from the storerooms and nailed them to the kitchen floor. They had been at their work for nearly a week, and had, they not carelessly taken the toboggan out and left it in the yard, might still be enting preserves and ransacking Mr. Ten Eyek's strong boxes. The actual damage done will amount to about $200 but out of regard for the relatives of the urchins Mr. Ten Eyek will not prossecute them. Mr. Ten Eyek was formerly a resident of New York city and had a seat in the Stock Exchange.

Patrolman Michael Pogarty of the East ed only six weeks ago, was dismissed fro force vesterday. The charges pending against him are that he was arrested for assault, that he was in a liquor store, and that he was absent from roll call.

Patrolman Charles Van Cott of the Grand Central Station found a sum of money in the waiting room. He failed to report it until his attention was called to it. Yesterday he was fined five days' pay and transferred. street station was detailed as Acting Sergeant.

Patrolman James Adams of Fifty-first street was detailed for special duty to the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association. John J. Conneily was appointed a patrolman. The tollowing transfers were ordered:

Philip B. Miner. East Thirty-fifth street to Mercer street; John H. Reilly, West Twentieth street to West Thirty-seventh street; William L. Braun. West Thirty-seventh street; William L. Braun. West Thirty-seventh street; William L. Braun. West Thirty-seventh street; William Seckman. Kingsbridge.

The Commissioners received from the Civil Service Board the following list of roundsmen eligible for promotion to a Serveanicy. There are nine vacancies which will probably be filled at the next meeting of the Beard:

A Vacation that Didn't Par.

William E. Kelly, alias "Jocko," an escaped convict from the State prison at Charlestown, Mass., who was arrested as he came ashore from the steamship Spain on Tuesday, was arraigned yesterday at the bar of the General essions, before Judge Martine, upon a requisessions, before judge Marline, upon a requisition from the Governor of Massachusetta.

Relly signed an acknowledgment of his identity, and Judge Marline directed that he be turned over in State Agent Fuller of Massachusetts, who took him to Boston. Kelly was convected in May last, under the Habitual triminal act, and was sentenced to the State prison at Charlestewn for twenty-five years.

He escaped on Oct. S, and went to England.
He will now have to serve out his term, losing on account of his escape, commutation for good conduct.

Its most novel feature is what the author calls a topographt. eal biography of Lamb, an accurate record of his rovings and his many dwelling places in London. These are faithfully traced and fully considered, and accompanied by very interest ing illustrations by Herbert Railton and John Fulleylove. But the volume is a deligntful essay as well, telling all about Lamb, and presenting a notably skilful and effective picture of the man. Nor must we overlook another notable feature of the book, an admirable bib liography afforded by Mr. Ernest D. North, re cording in separate tables the leading events in Lamb's life, the first editions of his writings. the "Elia" esrays, the reviews and poems, the collected and single works, the letters, and the miscellaneous productions. The Scribners afford also a volume of Richard Henry Stoddard's thoughtful and scholarly and graceful poems under the title of "The Lion's Cub and Other Verse," with an excellent portrait of the author, and "How the Other Half Lives," a striking record by Jacob A. Her skill in the employment of the Yankeedialect would suffice to make them notable, but they are recommended still more highly by their graceful fancy and by a humor which. though a trifle forced at times, is altogether too good to be quarrelled with. "How Faith Came and Went" is a delightful story, poetiois its imagination, rarely delicate in its manship; and the fun of the idea and of much of the detail in the sketch entitled "Butterneggs" must put all readers under very great obligations to the author of "The Beven Dreamers." ## SUNDAY SUN

For 1891

Has made the most important literary engagements ever entered into by any American periodical or newspaper.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVEN-SON'S South Sea Letters will begin with the New Year. They will appear only in THE SUNDAY SUN, and they will constitute the great literary feature of 1891.

A new story by the same celebrated author, who writes "the Best and Purest English of our time," will be published during January in THE SUNDAY SUN.

H. RIDER HAGGARD'S "Erio" will also begin in January. It is more of a fighting drama than even "King Solomon's Mines," a Norseland epic of tremendous fire and imagination. Its equal has not been seen. It will appear only in THE SUNDAY SUN.

Later in 1891 THE SUNDAY SUN will print the novel of the year by the Coming Man of English fiction, the writer of 1891, who, with the publication of this astonishing novel, will have arrived. OTHER ORIGINAL LITERARY FEATURES ARE BL. PECTED FROM THE POLLOWING CONTRIBUTORS:

W. D. Howells, T. A. Edison, John Swinton, A. Jay Cummings, George Meredith, William Black, Andrew Lang, W. Clark Russell, St. George Mivart, Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, Norman Lockyer, And many other Renowned Writers.
